

Rainbows

Dr. Christopher M. Godfrey
University of North Carolina at Asheville

© C. Godfrey

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Rainbows

© C. Godfrey

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Secondary Rainbow

Primary & secondary bows. The secondary at right is nearly always fainter than the primary. Its colours are reversed and more widely separated. These bows were captured by Matt Spinetta in South Dakota on 4th July, 2005. ©2005 real sunrise

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Alexander's Dark Band

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Alexander's Dark Band

Morning rainbows - Norfolk, England. Photo: Ken Cowley

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Supernumerary Rainbows

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Supernumerary Rainbows

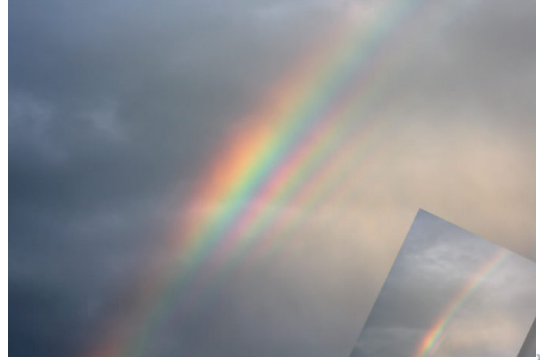

Source: <http://www.atoptics.co.uk>

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Supernumerary Rainbows

Ian Goddard saw this rarity in Somerset, UK on 7th August 2007 (<http://www.atoptics.co.uk/rainbows/bowim46.htm>)

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

Rainbow Spokes

Saskatchewan rainbow spokes. Lary Phillips pictured this unusual rainbow during a storm late on July 17, 2003. ©2003 Lary Phillips, shown with permission.

Many of the images shown here are copyrighted and are displayed at <http://www.atoptics.co.uk>.

ATMS 455: Physical Meteorology

